Dearest Fink,

I'll kind of slip this one in the envelope with the record. The record might have been better if I'd written up a little speech, but maybe you'll like it anyway. I thought after I made it, I should have mentioned Skinny and Viola on the record 'cause you'll probably play it on their record player, but you can say hello to them for me anyway.

It's been a grand day here, even if I did spend it on K. P. It's an easy job on Sunday. The mail man's been good to me yesterday and today. One from Chuck, one from Mom and Dad and one from Sis yesterday. Then one from you today. I sure like to get letters, and especially yours, sweetie. That's why I always try to write everyday. You're such a faithful writer, and then too it doesn't seem as if my day is complete unless I write to you. I probably repeat myself, but you'll forgive me for that, won't you, lover?

If you do go on ten hours a day be sure and get lots of rest and sleep, darling 'cause that is a long day. There I go, borsing you around, (that's a husband for you.) I love you so much, sweetheart, and I want my baby to take care of himself.

This is really a short letter sweetie, but maybe along with the record it will do for today. I think I'd better mail this separate because the other envelope may be opened for postal inspection. Good nite darling wife, All my love to the sweetest, bestest, and darlinest lover,

Your Own,
Jack
